Biography

Gregory Hilaire was born in France and grew up in Dakar, Senegal. At a young age, his family moved to Manchester, England. There, he studied at St. Monica High School where he was introduced to acting through the "David Copperfield" play based on the Charles Dickens novel.

He auditioned for a role as a kid hanging out in the streets using his experiences from Africa. Unfortunately, he didn't get the role but it inspired him to pursue an acting career. Excited by this new adventure, he began by appearing in few movies and TV shows as an extra.

When Gregory turned 16, living in Paris, France, he decided to stop his studies and took several jobs at local marketplaces and clothing stores in order to help his mother. Despite the obstacles of life, Gregory never gave up on his dreams. Today, he still pursues his interests of acting, modeling, dance and music.
